Growing up, I needed that person who would never give up on me and challenge me to do my best. I wanted that person who only wanted to see you shine, so I decided to dedicate my time to being that for my student. It quickly became clear that they not only needed me, but I needed them as well. Throughout the first couple of weeks of school I met two students that wanted absolutely nothing to do with me. I wanted to build those relationships and get them to open up, feel comfortable, and trust me. Each day, I made an effort to greet them and try to get to know them. It was not easy, but the challenges and hurdles were nothing compared to the reward. Hard work, consistency, and dedication to these students allowed me to create two very special relationships that I will carry with me forever. These boys now gravitate towards me, and do everything they can to try and make me proud. Whether its running over to show me their test scores or to implementing the behavioral techniques and coping mechanisms I have been continuously working with them on. I am so grateful that I made the decision to serve with City Year. Every day, my students bring me joy and I am excited to what the rest of the year holds.
